Ruellia humilis 'Blue Shade'

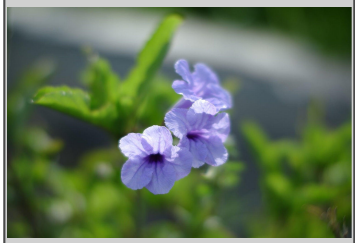

Blue Shade Wild Petunia

Family: Acanthaceae

Passage N_S: 39 TOTAL 39

OTHER

OTHER

OTHER

FLOWER

QUICK FACTS

Plant Type: Not stated

Evergreen or deciduous
Hardy USDA Zones 4–9. Fully suitable for Atlanta Zone 8a. Drought tolerant once established. Prefers full sun for best bloom.
Not stated as problematic

Growth & Size
Rate: Not stated
Size: Herbaceous perennial, 1.5–3 ft tall × 1–2 ft wide. Clumping to spreading. 5–2 ft); Native Plant Trust; PlantNative.org

Sun

Water

Soil
Dry to medium, well-drained soils. Prefers good drainage

Zone 8a
Hardy USDA Zones 4–9. Fully suitable for Atlanta Zone 8a. Drought tolerant once established. Prefers full sun for best bloom.
Not stated as problematic

PLANTING NOTES

Planting
None stated

ORIGIN AND CHARACTERISTICS

Origin
Cultivar of Ruellia humilis, native to central and eastern United States (including Georgia)

Form
Low to medium clump-forming perennial with bushy habit.
Short internodes

Foliage
Oblong to lanceolate, olive-green, softly hairy leaves.
Dies back in winter

Flowers and fruit
Tubular, petunia-like, lavender to lilac-blue flowers (to ~2–3 in) with five shallow lobes. Bloom late spring through fall (May–October). Attracts butterflies and bees.
Explosive seed capsules

Bark
Not stated

HEALTH

Health
Generally low maintenance. No serious pests or diseases stated.
Deer resistant. org; Grow Native!

Symptoms
None stated