Atlanta Botanical Garden - Expansion

Rosmarinus officinalis 'Prostratus'

Trailing Rosemary, Prostrate Rosemary, Creeping Rosemary

Family: Lamiaceae

Rockery: 15 TOTAL 15

HABIT

OTHER

LEAF

FLOWER

QUICK FACTS

Plant Type: Not stated

Evergreen or deciduous
Evergreen

Growth & Size
Rate: Not stated
Size: prostrate groundcover / sub, 1–2 ft tall × 3–8 ft wide.; cascading or mounding

Sun

Water

Soil
Excellent drainage essential (sandy, rocky, or raised beds)

Zone 8a
Hardy USDA Zones 8–11. Marginal but suitable for Atlanta Zone 8a with excellent drainage and protection from prolonged wet cold. Heat tolerant. May experience tip dieback in coldest winters; prune as needed. Not stated as fully reliable without good site selection

PLANTING NOTES

Planting
None stated

ORIGIN AND CHARACTERISTICS

Origin
Cultivar of Mediterranean native (Rosmarinus/Salvia rosmarinus). Not native to North America

Form
Trailing, prostrate, woody evergreen.
Excellent cascading over walls or as groundcover

Foliage
Needle-like, aromatic, gray-green evergreen leaves.
Edible (culinary herb)

Flowers and fruit
Pale blue to lavender (sometimes white) flowers, primarily winter through spring; may bloom sporadically other seasons.
Attracts bees and butterflies

Bark
Not stated

HEALTH

Health
Generally low maintenance. Root rot if poorly drained. Spittlebug possible. No serious problems stated under proper conditions. Edible

Symptoms
None stated